SOUTHERN BAPTISTS: A PRAYING PEOPLE IMPACTING A LOST WORLD

Indigenous missionaries plant gospel seeds

IN NOVEMBER 2014, two missionaries, Limber and Chango, left Panama in a small boat and went to northern Colombia to work among their own people who had never heard the gospel. They spent three months traveling the rivers of the Amazon jungle, sharing the gospel in many communities with restricted access to outsiders. They were able to move about the area freely because they were indigenous.

In July 2015, IMB missionaries went on a follow-up trip to visit one of the communities where Limber and Chango had been. During a Sunday morning worship service, one young woman interrupted the missionaries to say that she wanted to give her life to Christ and make a public profession of faith. She told the missionaries that Chango had witnessed to her, but she hadn't been ready to respond then. However, after hearing the Bible stories this day, she felt strong conviction. The young woman knelt and prayed aloud in her own words, asking Jesus to be her Lord and Savior.

After the worship service, she and four others were baptized in the river. All five had been witnessed to by Limber and Chango in November 2014. Praise God for the faithful testimony of these brothers, and pray that these five new believers will grow in their faith and share the gospel with many others.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, declared the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts. (Isaiah 55:8-9, ESV)

Trusting in His ways

PREPARATIONS HAD BEEN COMPLETED and Josh Murphree was ready to lead a two-day chronological Bible storying training in a remote Peruvian town with two national partners. Russ Fleetwood, Josh's teammate, and Pedro, another national partner, had not planned to go on the trip, but in the final weeks of planning decided that they should.

On the morning they were to leave, Josh fell ill and made the hard decision to stay home. The two national partners that were to accompany him were also unable to make the trip, so Russ and Pedro traveled to the town and Pedro led the training in the Quechua language for 50 enthusiastic learners. When at the end of the first day of training a community workday was announced to take place the following day, one of the church leaders declared, "This is where all of us believers need to be. We'll work for the community another day."

On the road to a Peruvian town.

Josh, Russ, and their national partners had planned and prepared for every detail of this training, but God had different plans. The teammates and national partners trusted that the Lord would work things out, and He blessed and provided in special ways. Praise the Father, and ask Him to help all the missionaries, national partners, and believers to trust in His ways as His Word goes forth.
